Excerpt from The Cloister; A Play in Four Acts: Translated by Osman Edwards The five Balthazars whom I have seen the most fiery, the most tragic was certainly M. De Max. The performance given by M. Liten s company at the Kingsway Theatre in January 1915, would have been more convincing if the part of Dom Mark had not been left in feminine hands. Apart from this the ensemble was excellent. Gratitude no less than honesty impels me to record that no foreign impersonator of the gentle boy-monk was able to express the beauty and tenderness of the part so perfectly as Mr. Esme Percy, who induced Miss Horniman to mount The Cloister for a week at the Gaiety Theatre, Manchester, on 3 Oe tober 1910. There was no wave of pro-belgian sympathy at that time to ?oat the play into fame, but the critics declared its production to be a triumph of courage and initiative. Its reception by both press and public on its own merits, aided, of course, by a competent and well-trained company, encourages me to believe that the translator is not wholly traitor. Mr. Percy has undertaken to introduce the play during the coming season to the people of Birmingham, Newcastle, Glasgow, and Edinburgh. His long and intimate acquaintance with this drama, which dates from its first performance in Brussels, should ensure for it a faithful and fervent lease of life among lovers of great poetry, even though it be seen through the glass, darkly, of anglo-saxon translator and interpreters.
