Excerpt: . . . for his truth, for his Majesty hath kepted us still in suspense all this time, and as he has mingled our former steps with fear, so now he keeps us in the same temper, to the end our rejoicing might as it should be; but if we will continue to do as we have begun, in supplication to our God and our King, and set our face towards our Lord, and hold the rule of his word before our eyes, and make Himself our fear and our dread, we need not to think anything else, and acknowledge his sovereignty over all his creatures. This is the short cut and perfect rule by which our goings must be ordered, and if in this path we meet with hard trouble, sweet and solid comfort will be the upshot of them all, provided we could wait with patience on our Lord, because out of all doubt the assembly will be tried; therefore let us arm ourselves with the strength of our Lord to defend all our laudable constitutions, and withal bear with pity the misconstructions of the world, making use of our liberty and labour to walk in a pure pointed-out light, wondering at all the passages of our Lords providence, and admiring the large measure of reformation granted to this land; rejoicing to see the shame and confusion rowled on the face of our adversaries. The King and his advisers rejected with contempt the proposals of...
