The Signorino will take coffee old Marietta asked, as she set the fruit before him. Peter deliberated for a moment; then burned his ships. Yes, he answered. But in the garden, perhaps the little brown old woman suggested, with a persuasive flourish. No, he corrected her, gently smiling, and shaking his head, not perhaps certainly. Her small, sharp old black Italian eyes twinkled, responsive. The Signorino will find a rustic table, under the big willow-tree, at the waters edge, she informed him, with a good deal of gesture. Shall I serve it there Where you will. I leave myself entirely in your hands, he said. So he sat by the rustic table, on a rustic bench, under the willow, sipped his coffee, smoked his cigarette, and gazed in contemplation at the view. Of its kind, it was rather a striking view. In the immediate foreground at his feet, indeed there was the river, the narrow Aco, peacock-green, a dark file of poplars on either bank, rushing pell-mell away from the quiet waters of the lake. Then, just across the river, at his left,...
