

Autonomous Resource Management in Dynamic Data Centers

By Oliver Niehörster

Shaker Verlag Mrz 2013, 2013. Taschenbuch. Condition: Neu. Neuware - Software as a Service (SaaS) providers offer customers easy and spontaneous access to applications that are usually run on virtualized hardware. While virtualization enables flexible administration and better hardware utilization, it turns the data centers into stochastic environments where it is hard to avoid overprovisioning and at the same time guarantee an agreed quality of service (QoS). The number of users and services increases, which makes it impossible to manage user requests manually. This thesis presents a control theory framework for ensuring the QoS for any given SaaS. For this the resources of the system - such as resource allocations and configuration parameters - are adapted during runtime. The framework supports the adjustment of multiple resources and, in contrast to previous work, also allows for resources whose reconfiguration causes long delays. The concepts are integrated into a multi-agent system consisting of a scheduler agent and multiple worker agents. Each user request is controlled by an autonomous worker agent, which is equipped with controller implementations and application-specific knowledge allowing it to estimate the type and number of necessary resources. All worker agents interact with the scheduler agent, which takes care of..
