As children, were asked, What do you want to be when you grow up As adults were asked, What do you do for a living We identify with our jobs, they define us. Were often so busy with our jobs, theres little time to question our chosen paths. That is, until life steps in. The Great Recession of 2008 left hundreds of thousands feeling lost and insecure; a similar but much bigger event occurred in 1929. When such events occur, we could fall into despair or perhaps it could be the time to re-evaluate what we really want out of life. What is most important to you Most of you would say that youd like to be better, happier people. In their pursuit of happiness people have defined themselves by their careers, their money, their possessions. They have acted as though their self-esteem, their self-worth, could be bought. Material acquisition became a way of life. Bigger and more is better. And then in a nanosecond it all can disappear. Wealth vanishes, careers and jobs are wiped out. Then what This paradigm could be referred to as living life...
