Furthermore, the structure and the current situation of the Northern Ireland school system are shortly summed up. In the second part, I will provide information about NICIE. This includes their history, work, organization, as well as their aims as a group, that wants to offer support and to encourage the peace process in Northern Ireland. Furthermore, NICIE's own definition of integrated education, as well as responses and recommendations to official bodies. Three studies will be presented in the third part of this paper. Two studies, which were set up and published by Claire McGlynn and a opinion poll, which was employed by NICIE. Northern Ireland, since its partition from Southern Ireland, had always been confronted with religious tension. The result has been conflict...
