Excerpt from Hints and Observations for Those Investigating the Phenomena of Spiritualism At present it is a matter of individual judgment and of experience. The time is coming, I think, when even communication of this kind will come about as a result of the research which will undoubtedly be applied to the whole subject generally in the years immediately ahead of us, but that time is not yet. So it is at present impossible to demonstrate the other world's reality to everybody. Each must find matter for his own conviction. Each must experiment for himself and come to his own conclusions. And such investigation is not easy. Reliable mediums are scarce; the phenomena even when genuine are subtle and mostly outside the scheme of things as we know them in this world; there are fraud and humbug around; there are the questions of the subconscious mind and various strata of consciousness, secondary and tertiary personality, unconscious action of the medium, telepathy, and so on. So on the whole it is only to the relatively few that the knowledge and conviction can come that survival is a fact.
