Forgotten Books, United States, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from The Lion s Claw Trail: The Camel s Hump Region of the Green Mountains of Vermont The re-location of the Long Trail south of Camel s Hump was suggested, and at once appealed to Professor Monroe as an Opportunity for a choice bit of scenic trail which would make a highly impressive approach to the Lion from the south. His plan was to bring up camp equipment, food and tents for the accommodation of six. Two friends were to accompany him from New York, and relays of Green Mountain club members were to be his guests while working on the trail. The building of the trail being assured, the next in order was to prospect and blaze a trail route to save time for the builders. Two Green Mountain club members, Clarence P. Cowles and J. E. Woodruff, went from Burlington June 9, where they were joined by Forester Chamberlain and spent two days prospecting. The chosen route south of the big cliff proved impossible; the ground is covered with boulders of all shapes and sizes separated by wide and deep crevices, all mixed in with a dense growth of scrub spruce, or, where the mountain has been burnt over, a jungle of slash. Those knolls, so gentle when seen from aloft, on approach turned into steep hills, three or four hundred feet high, bristling with slash. It was a question of spending days to a mile of trail or going around, so the line of least resistance was followed. The scouts on the second day lined out the trail to a point five and one-half miles south of the Lion, when dense fog with heavy rain ended the...
