To this is added within about 20 seconds, 17 gms. acetic anhydride with vigorous stirring, by which means the amino group of the H-acid is completely acetylated. The completeness of the acetylation is determined by acidifying a small test portion of the solution with hydrochloric acid, adding a few drops sodium nitrite solution, and then mixing with an alkaline solution of H-acid. If no unchanged H-acid is present, no coloration will be produced, as no diazotizable group will be available. This compound may be coupled with various diazo components to give beautiful azo colours which are very fast to light, and which possess excellent levelling properties; with diazotized aniline, for instance, the important Aminonaphthol Red G is formed. As the acetyl group is somewhat easily hydrolysed, it is necessary to carry out the coupling with very little soda, and, in addition, to have some ammonia present, which volatilizes when the finished colour is dried, without altering the latter. Fig. 22.--Laboratory vacuum filter (Nutsch). 0/3 Gms. aniline (1/10 mol.) are diazotized as described, and the 93 gms. diazonium solution is then mixed with the ice-cold acetyl-H-acid, to Aniline. which 15 gms. of 100 soda has previously been added. After Na₂CO₃. 1 minute, 20 c.cs. concentrated ammonia are added, drop by drop, 20 and the mass is allowed to stand for 12 hours, after which the dye is salted out in the cold with 20 of salt, calculated upon the volume 20 NaCl....
