

DOWNLOAD

Building on a Borrowed Past: Place and Identity in Pipestone, Minnesota (Paperback)

By Sally J. Southwick

Ohio University Press, United States, 2005. Paperback. Condition: New. 1. Language: English . Brand New Book. Building on a Borrowed Past: Place and Identity in Pipestone, Minnesota traces the result when one culture absorbs the heritage of another for civic advantage. Founded in 1874, Pipestone was named for the quarries where regional tribes excavated soft stone for making pipes. George Catlin and Henry Wadsworth Longfellow described the place and its tribal history. Promotion by white residents of the quarries as central to America s Indian heritage helped Pipestone obtain a federal Indian boarding school in the 1890s and a national monument in the 1930s. The annual Song of Hiawatha pageant attracted tourists after World War II. Sally J. Southwick s prize-winning study demonstrates how average, small-town citizens contributed to the generic image of the Indian in American culture. Examining oral histories, memoirs, newspapers, federal documents, civic group records, and promotional literature, Southwick focuses on middle-class individuals as active in establishing historical, place-based identity. Building on a Borrowed Past reveals how identities form through adapting the meanings of cultural, spiritual, racial, and historical symbols. The ways in which town residents produced and maintained the place s image illustrate white Americans continued assumption...

READ ONLINE

[1.15 MB]

Reviews

This is the very best publication i have got go through until now. I am quite late in start reading this one, but better then never. I discovered this pdf from my dad and i encouraged this book to understand.

-- Casimer McGlynn

Most of these pdf is the best book readily available. It usually is not going to expense a lot of Its been printed in an exceedingly easy way which is only soon after i finished reading this publication in which actually transformed me, change the way i really believe.

-- Hadley Haag