Not illustrated. 1896 Excerpt: .that the officials of the committee should consider the question of the extended lighting of the city by electricity, and also investigate into the relative merits of gas lighting as compared with incandescent electric lighting for use in the subsidiary streets. In the meantime it was agreed to push forward the alterations of the lamps at the Charing Cross end of Sauchiehall-street, converting them from the present astragal form into hanging globes similar to those used in other cities. The committee felt on the whole question of the electric lighting of the streets that the effect of the Corporation having been comparatively early in the field was that they were suffering from many initiatory blunders that had been made, and that in carrying out further improvements they would profit by the experience they had gained. Portsmouth--The report of the Electric Lighting Committee presented at the meeting of the Town Council recommended that a joint committee, consisting of five members of the Electric Lighting and Roads and Works Committees, should be formed for the purpose of opening negotiations with the tramway company for the purchase of the tramway and for the leasing of the same to the company, and supplying the company with electrical energy for their cars upon terms to be mutually arranged, the committee to report progress to the Council. Alderman Ellis said the Portsmouth Company had gone to Parliament for power to run the overhead system of electric traction, and no doubt Parliament would...
