Excerpt: .long, and the last one 1.8 miles, beyond the Cheat river. From this last station it was only 1,289.1 feet to the end of the third section of the line which terminated at a mound on the land of Mr. Albert Harvey, where the fourth latitude station was located. There was no scarcity of mounds on this part of the line; indeed, from the beginning of Mason and Dixon s line proper, the mounds were found in sufficient numbers to reproduce the line without any trouble. The bend to the south was found quite regular from the first departure from the curve, at 21 miles from the south-west corner, to the first mound west of the Monongahela river, where it turns to the northward, and from there to the end of the third section, it was nearly parallel to the curve through the south-west corner, and about 174A feet south of it, and 162.7 feet south of the theoretic curve and accepted boundary through Lantz s hill. As far as traced, the following description will show the condition of the boundary: From the south-west corner to Lantz s hill, the boundary, as reproduced from the old marks, is not the astronomical parallel derived from the latitude observations, regarding each astronomical position as absolute; nor does it coincide with the theoretical curve passing through the south-west corner of Pennsylvania, but it isa curve that falls 11 feet 9 inches south of this last named curve at...
