Excerpt: .compounded by a fine of 300. Other names, at the request, it was said, of Anne Boleyn, were dropped from the bill. More's escape has often been attributed to the intercession of Cromwell, its true cause was, almost certainly, 1534. April 21. the opposition of the Peers. When they had saved the aristocracy, the Lords considered that their duties ended, the attainder of the Nun and her common associates was passed, and they were executed at Tyburn. Parliament was prorogued on the 30th of March, and a commission was appointed to administer the new oaths. The clergy and the religious houses were specially required to swear; it seems that few laymen were called upon. The acceptance of the oath had been unanimous until, on the 13th of April, Fisher and More were summoned before the commissioners. They appeared singly, but their line of...
