Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Sing the South During the past few years, Mr. J. M. Lewis has conducted a column of poetry, whims and fancies in the Houston Daily Post. Humor, wit, squibs and poems have owed freely from his facile pen, and the product has been accepted with appreciation by his friends and the reading public. Many of his friends whose fancies have been pleased and whose hearts have been moved by the delicate spirit of his poems, have thought that they should not be left to the precarious existence of memory and the scrap-book, and have accordingly prevailed upon Mr. Lewis to collect some of these wandering whims of fancy and to print them into a book.
