CASCADE BOOKS, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Is Christian mission even possible today? In a secular age, is it possible to talk about the goodness of God in a compelling way? How should the church proceed? Carolyn Chau explores the question of Catholic mission in a secular age through a constructive interpretation of the work of two celebrated Catholic thinkers, philosopher Charles Taylor and theologian Hans Urs von Balthasar, arguing that Taylor and Balthasar together offer a promising path for mission today. Chau attends to Taylor's account of the conditions of belief today, and the genesis of the sociohistorical limits on contemporary God-talk, as well as his affirmation of certain aspects of Western modernity's culture. From Balthasar, Chau sifts out the distinctiveness of his view of the human person as defined by mission, and his encouragement of a kenotic self-understanding of the church. In the end, Chau claims that if modern persons in secular Western societies are seeking fulfillment and integrity, Christian spirituality remains a rich resource on offer. This splendid study rethinks the controverted categories mission and secularization. By widening the conversation to include Charles Taylor on secularization and Hans Urs Von Balthasar on mission and ecclesiology, the author aids us all. An important and original book. --David Tracy, The University of Chicago If Charles Taylor's diagnosis of our secular age is on the mark, what should the Church do? Carolyn Chau takes on this important question with great insight, sympathy, and clarity. The result is an account of the Church's mission that is neither defensive nor capitulative, but offers Christ as a way of helping people realize their best selves. At the same time, Chau cuts through polarization in the Church to help the Church realize its best self. For the Church trying...
