A protecting duty had been laid on the sugar of the East, evidently for the benefit of the West India planters. But then the Mauritius, produced sugar by means of Slave labour. It was proposed to relieve the Mauritius, thus situated, from the protecting duty, and continue to levy it on India. Remonstrances against this were strongly urged but in vain. The Parliament and the Ministry, as if from an instinctive partiality to the produce of the labour and the blood of slaves, carried the measure into effect, and, in respect of the protecting duty, put the Mauritius on a footing with the colonies which are cultivated by slaves, and discouraged the cultivation in those parts only where it is carried on men! This fact by itself might evince that the Legislature {government are heterodox on the question of abolition altogether, - that they are unworthy of any thing like implicit confidence in the matter, - that they must be instructed and addressed by their constituents and by the people, in a tone which they will feel it difficult or impossible to disregard.
