This book can be worthy of a read, and much better than other. It usually fails to charge a lot of. I realized this publication from my dad and i encouraged this pdf to understand.

Pursuant to a congressional request, GAO reviewed Department of Defense (DOD) initiatives to phase out ozone-depleting chemicals. GAO found that: (1) DOD has established internal programs and joint efforts with industry and federal agencies to identify and develop alternatives to using ozone-depleting chemicals; (2) DOD is evaluating, purchasing, and using refrigerant and halon recovery and recycling equipment and has reduced its halon emissions during training and testing activities; (3) the Office of the Secretary of Defense (OSD) has defined mission-critical uses so broadly that the military departments have significant latitude in identifying uses that can continue beyond the planned phase-out; (4) since DOD has neither identified or tracked all of its ozone-depleting chemical usage quantities, specific uses, and emissions, the services are not fully aware of where and in what quantities all the regulated chemicals are used; (5) although DOD estimates that it will cost about 250 million to test, evaluate, and qualify new materials for mission-critical applications, OSD and the services are slow in providing the resources to ensure that safe and acceptable alternatives will be available to support DOD phase-out of those regulated chemicals; (6) DOD is continuing to install equipment that uses ozone-depleting chemicals in existing and new aircraft and ships; (7) over 9, 600 military specifications and standards currently require contractors to use ozone-depleting chemicals; and (8) although, in many cases, DOD could opt for using nonmilitary specifications and standards to promote the use of safe and acceptable alternatives, as of September 1, 1991, it had revised only one standard to allow the use of alternatives.
