From myths and legends, Truth would never have come to believe in such realms other than hers. Such foolish worlds as spirits, Heaven and Hell existing from above, below or caught in between the living, these lost wondering spirits that roam amongst humans hungry and envying the living. After almost drowning to death thinking only caused by an accident and never of any spiritual encounter, this incident unveiled what would forever change her to possess such a gift of becoming what is slowly lost from mankind, a Shama. She would soon discover more to life than just living as a normal person who struggles solving and perceiving what will become of her in a human society. With little known and the slightest breath of accepting as true or not believing in other realms, now as a protector of all three worlds, she must quickly focus herself on mastering her own supernatural abilities. Yet, this would not come easy for Truth as a generation of curse has been lingering about in the Fang family. Struck by many misfortunes throughout their history, this disaster of luck would soon lay it s hands down on her teacher. Seeking revenge and with so many task at hand, how would Truth and her guardian Faiths be able to lift the curse and defeat what is known by all Shamas as the Dlaab Yim.
