Emerson, after examining and putting into proper form the records of the triangulation of Hawaii, left for that island May 2nd, for the purpose of identifying and re-marking the remainder of the original trig. Stations in the districts of Hilo and Hamakua, which were first occupied twenty years ago. Since then a number of sugar plantations have been started, and many changes have been made in those districts. In several cases the concrete posts marking the stations have been ploughed up, and in some cases the marking stones have been thrown over precipices. Still, many of the underground marks, generally copper triangles, were found where they had been buried in 1881.
