Excerpt from The Life and Times of Sixtus the Fifth, Vol. 2 of 2 AT the time of which we write the Pope ruled with the advice of the cardinals. They assembled for the purpose in a Consistory, Wherein, with the assistance of other prelates of different grades and positions, matters concerning the Church throughout the world were treated. The Pope submitted to them those questions which they had to examine, and, after hearing what they had to say, gave his final decision. In former times this mode of proceeding sufficed to meet the requirements of the moment, and enabled the members of the Consistory to have constantly before their eyes the spiritual necessities of the world, and to be well informed of the great political questions which are so often intimately connected with religious interests. It also insured their taking a part in the government of the Church; for an Opinion once adopted unanimously vol. II B.
