Excerpt from Freedom in the University: Outline of an Address Before the Phi Beta Kappa Society, University of Cincinnati, June 2, 1908 Every true university is organized on the democratic plan; it holds truth as its supreme ideal and maintains freedom as the first condition of learning. Dr. Gladden, than whom we have no greater prophet of Democracy, told us today what Democracy had already accomplished, and gave us a splendid vision of what it is still to do. Dr. Philipson, the President of our Phi Beta Kappa, has often spoken to us of the ideals of Truth. I wish to speak now of the third great principle of the university, Academic Freedom. The freedom of learning, of research, and of teaching is the jealously-guarded palladium of the true university jealously guarded because won through long centuries of strife. Universities have not always been free, and all universities are not free today. In the early days they were in bondage to the church, which held in its powerful grip the soul of humanity, and sought, by the mandate of authority, to direct the thoughts of men. The classical Renaissance gave the world again the liberating influence of the Greek ideals of the harmonious development of the whole man, of body, mind and soul, in the pursuit of learning and the expression of beauty. Yet this partial emancipation soon yielded to the new tyranny of a dead scholasticism. Only in the last century did the conquering spirit of universal liberty finally uplift the fair figure of academic freedom and enthrone her in the university, to be forever the guardian of the rights of men - to learn to teach, and to live...
