Life moves fast in Africa, and as a young Rhodesian policeman Tom soon becomes involved in the struggle for independence as the Winds of Change sweep through the continent. He falls in love, marries and after three years in the police force leaves to pursue his love of farming. When terrorist attacks on farmers begin he joins the Police Anti Terrorist Unit. The black policeman, who worked with him in the police force, joins his unit and for the next 12 years they are involved in the Rhodesian Bush War. During this time while on patrol Tom and his unit come in contact with terrorists on a number of occasions and are involved in, contacts, ambushes, land mines and skirmishes. Over the years they cross paths on a number of occasions with a terrorist leader - Mamba - who loses his leg when an ambush goes wrong, and swears to get his revenge on those responsible. During this time Tom suffers a great personal loss when his wife is killed in an ambush. 20 years after the war had ended...
