Excerpt from Fairy Tales and Grown-Up Talk And Roderick and Santa Claus, hand in hand, Merrily strolled through this marvelous land, Dancing and singing and laughing the while, (for in Santa Claus land such is the style.) Then stopping in front of the beautiful star, At Santa s command its doors stood a-jar; And two little elves, no bigger than rats, With jeweled garments and golden hats, Ushered them into this palace of toys Santa Claus home, and the home of noise For rap-a-tap-tap and the cracking of boards, The song of the saw and the clangor of swords, The call of the bugle and beat of the drum, Was enough to make anyone deaf and dumb. Poor little Roderick could do naught but gasp, As he stood with his hand in Santa s strong clasp; For never in all of his life before, Had be seen such a wonderful great, big store; But after a while his fear passed away.
