But deeds, habits and actions of all kinds constitute conduct. Thus we find conduct and character complementary and mutually re-active upon each other. They are as closely unified as are the respective totalities of mind and body of which they are, in fact, but phases. Thus we may regard character as a state of mind, and conduct as the physical manifestation of this state. Or, conduct may be conceived as a course of action, and character as the resulting impress on the mind. This brings us to the point where we can see that moral training or character training is essentially a matter inseparable from conduct. The time-honored principle, we learn by doing, has here its full application. There is nothing of mystery or of difficulty in the practice of moral training, and it is far more effective...
