Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .After chancing upon a copy of Felix Hoppy, Esq. M.C. s The Strangers Guide Through Little Pedlington , the book s intrepid traveller forgoes the more exotic sights of Europe for the delights of an English Country Town, described by it s celebrated resident poet Jubb in the following glowing terms; Hail, Pedlingtonia, Hail, thou favoured spot! What s good is found in thee; what s not, is not. Whilst there he meets many of the prominent townspeople, including: Rummins the antiquarian and curator of the Rumminsian Museum , containing such wondrous artifacts as the two sword blades - one of which bears a striking resemblance to a modern scythe, the other to a carving knife - amongst it s many exhibits. Another of Pedlington s illustrious residents is Felix Hoppy (author of the famous guide), who, alongside his literary credentials is also the town s Master of Ceremonies and renowned Dancing Master . It is Hoppy who puts on the town s third positively last performance by The Unrivalled and Never to be Equalled SIGNOR RUMBELLO DEL SQUEAK! Principal Pandea-tympanist to his Majesty the King of Naples (a.k.a. Rob Squeaks from Winklemouth fair). There is, of course, also the famous Jubb - author of the inspirational words above - as well as a varied assemblage of the townsfolk. First published in 1836, but now available in this brand new modern edition, the book is a first class example of British humour and brings together an hilarious selection of characters, as recognisable today in any high street in a British country Town as they were then.
