Excerpt from Cancer and the Public Health: Addresses Delivered at a Meeting for Health Officers, January 29, 1916, Arranged by the Boston Local Committee of the American Society for the Control of Cancer It is always a peculiar pleasure for me to appear in Boston, for I have many friends here who are interested in the questions upon which I am to speak to-day. I am also glad to. Address the members of the State Board of Health and the Visiting nurses who come in contact with many of the unfortunates in whom cancer has gone beyond the stage of cure; and it is an additional pleasure to represent the American Society for the Control of Cancer, which is a rather recent organization devoted wholly to the propaganda for controlling cancer by insisting on its curability by early operation, its wide spread occurrence, and other interesting and important facts which the public should know. In the United States we are very particular about our animals; we prevent the farmer from keeping a cow with tuberculosis; but we allow the head of a family to keep children with as many diseases as they care to collect. We regulate our animal population; but we neglect the human race. What the publicists and health officers, however, are now trying to do is not to regulate too much, not merely to pass laws, because laws are of very little importance unless people have intelligence enough to understand the reason for the laws, and hence to obey them willingly; but to educate the public on this subject of cancer. Now, why are we all so interested in cancer? Why was this American Society...
