In this early development a very important part was taken by the composer, Monteverde, who made the violin a regular member, and the strings the main body, of his orchestra. As instruments improved the tendency grew to write for the orchestra without voices. This led to the Suites or collections of dances for orchestra, a typical example of which is Bach's D-Major Suite (Records 35669, 35656). The suite developed into the symphony of Haydn, who, more than a century and a half ago, perfected the symphony orchestra with its four groups of instruments. Haydn's orchestra consisted of a string choir of first and second violins, violas, cellos and double-basses; these formed the backbone of the orchestra. The woodwind included not more than two flutes, two oboes, two clarinets, two bassoons, and two horns.
