University of Virginia Press, United States, 2007. Hardback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. Millipedes and Moon Tigers explores those uneasy places where scientific research meets public policy-making - and the resulting human effect on our natural and historical landscapes. Steve Nash's eye gravitates toward those specific, contemporary stories whose relevance does not diminish with a turn of the calendar's page, for they represent larger, looming issues. The destruction wrought upon native ecosystems by invasive species such as snakehead fish; the drastic and, in many cases, mysterious reduction in songbird populations in recent decades; the blight of a century ago that wiped out four billion chestnut trees, which once made up a quarter of the Eastern forest. Nash does more than lament the passing of the continent as it once was. He reveals the factors that have led to endangerment and extinction - from environmental policies that are terribly outdated to technologies that are evolving more quickly than our attitudes - and presents possible solutions, in both the political and scientific arenas. Nash follows an archaeobotanist on her research in the Near East to see what ancient agricultural practices in this now largely arid region can tell us about where the West may be heading. He writes of Civil War battlefields that, in the wake of new development, are being obliterated one by one - and, along with them, a wealth of lost archaeological opportunities. Turning to a more modern battlefield, he writes of agroterror - the intentional introduction of plant and animal diseases into agriculture and nature - and suggests what might be done to stop this new threat. Many of the essays explore the intersection of the environment and the most cutting-edge technology. Nash introduces us to the minnow-sized Glofish, America's first genetically engineered...
