Excerpt from Rowlandson the Caricaturist, Vol. 1 of 2: A Selection From His Works; With Anecdotal Descriptions of His Famous Caricatures and a Sketch of His Life, Times, and Contemporaries The neophyte, it is anticipated, will be somewhat startled at the first glance of the surroundings amidst which he will wander; but it is believed that, in the course of his journey through an anomalous past, he will alight on discoveries, more or less interesting in themselves, which provide abundant food for the student of humanity. Of this age, diversified with much which has been discarded, we accept Rowlandson as the fitting exponent. His works epitomise a state of being comparatively recent in actual fact, but, from the circumstances of change, so distantly removed in appearance, as to constitute a curious experience to the majority.
