Paperback. Condition: New. 236 pages. I despise you Judith Ann, I curse the day we adopted you and your brother! We owe you nothing because you are nothing, said Mother as saliva pooled at the corners of her mouth. She began to recklessly punch her daughter about the face and head, that unprovoked outburst, resulted from nothing other than seeing her young 7 year old daughter in her home. Exasperated as Mother was almost every single day. Go ahead say it Judith Ann, and with that my clue was given, I know Mother, I know I deserve nothing because I am nothing, and I am worth even less than that. I said it as vehemently as one tells a child theyre loved. My older adopted brother Jimmy, was in for it next. Although Mother never quite gave it to him in the same way. That didnt mean Jim was off the hook, for that same evening Father would begin his violent alcohol induced rages that may land him bleeding and slumped in the corner of his own bedroom. That was only the beginning of that evenings terror because on many nights, Father would come to me next. . . This was our life, for no more than after we were adopted as mere babies, Mother went on to have two biological children, her beloved son and daughter. The doctors admonition that conception would never occur, was certainly incorrect. Jim and I spent a lifetime paying for that physicians transgression. Judys physical damage required over 10 surgeries to repair years old bodily damage discovered in early adulthood where doctor upon doctor inquired, how did this happen, who did this to you! Unfortunately for Jimmy, a once bright and gifted straight A student, life since age 18 has him confined to mental...
