Preventive Services Task Force (USPSTF) recommendations on use of menopausal hormone therapy for postmenopausal women to prevent chronic health conditions such as cardiovascular disease, types of cancer, and osteoporotic fractures. Use of menopausal hormone therapy for treatment of menopausal symptoms, such as vasomotor hot flashes or urogenital atrophy, or for other indications is outside the scope of this review. Menopausal hormone therapy includes use of various forms, doses, and regimens of estrogen with or without progestin. Estrogen combined with progestin is used by women who have not had previous hysterectomies to prevent endometrial proliferation and endometrial cancer, whereas women with previous hysterectomies use estrogen only. In 2002, the USPSTF recommended against the routine use of combined estrogen and progestin hormone therapy for the prevention of chronic conditions in postmenopausal women who have not had hysterectomies because the harmful effects were likely to exceed the chronic disease prevention benefits in most women (D recommendation). Based on the results of systematic reviews³⁻¹¹ and early findings of the Womens Health Initiative (WHI) trial of estrogen plus progestin, the USPSTF found good evidence that combined hormone therapy results in both benefits and harms. Benefits included reduced risk for fracture (good evidence) and colorectal cancer (fair evidence). Combined estrogen and progestin had no beneficial effect on coronary heart disease and suggested an increased risk (good evidence). Other harms included increased risk for breast cancer (good evidence), venous thromboembolism (good evidence), stroke (fair evidence), cholecystitis (fair evidence), dementia (fair evidence), and lower global cognitive function (fair evidence). Because of insufficient evidence, the USPSTF could not assess effects on the incidence of ovarian cancer, mortality from breast...
