AN AINTREE DYNASTY: THE TOPHAMS AND THEIR GRAND NATIONAL (PAPERBACK)

Trafford Publishing, Canada, 2006. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .For over one hundred years the name Topham was inextricably linked to the Grand National, even though not a single runner in it ever carried their colours, and no member of the family ever rode over Aintree's famous fences. Yet their contribution to Grand National history was equally as important as all the heroes and heroines, both human and equine, who have thrilled successive generations of racegoers as they have done battle each spring to win the world's greatest steeplechase. For the Tophams were the promoters of the race, responsible for drawing up the race conditions, developing and maintaining the course itself, and, for much of the period, compiling the handicap as well. Without them, there simply would have been no Grand National. Edward William Topham, known as The Wizard was the founder of the dynasty. He was the first handicapper of the Grand National, and in 1848 he took over the management of Aintree racecourse and became the sole promoter of the Grand National. So successful was he that the family dynasty he established remained in control of Aintree through three generations for one hundred and twenty-five years until his grand-daughter-in-law, Mrs. Mirabel Topham, sold the course in 1973. So long an association of one family with a premier sporting event is unusual if not quite unparalleled. Yet although many books have been written about the Grand National, few of them have made more than a cursory reference to the family who promoted and maintained it - at least until Mirabel Topham began to hit the headlines in the 1950s and 60s. This neglect is undeserved, for the story of the Tophams is as colourful as any of the horses...
