He is a man who is capable of expressing himself in many ways. He is capable of giving and receiving love, he is capable of wanting the very best for his family, and he is capable of operating outside of the law. There is one thing Carl is not capable of, and that is saying the word sorry. Carl hates the word sorry so much he blots it out of his vocabulary altogether. He doesn't even allow it to be used in his presence by anyone else, especially by his son, C-3. Carol is Carl's wife and the mother of their only child. She loves her husband but not enough to let him corrupt their son and spoil his chances of becoming a preacher and living a holy life. So she draws power from God in making a decision to split the family in order to save their child, C-3. C-3, whose name is Carl Peters III, studies to be an ordained minister, something that both his mother and father want him to be. But before he can finish his course in bible college, he meets a young woman named Gorgeous, and even the name doesn't do her justice. He finds himself torn between church and the streets, so he reaches out to his best friend, Mace, and together, they decide to rule the streets in order to win the girl.
