Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from The Photo Playwright, Vol. 1: April, 1912 The first flash across the brain when one writes a play is the motive of the story. The prime essential is the idea. It is the essence of the plot, but it is without avail if it provides no opportunity for silent acting. As in a play, the construction of the moving picture scenario embodies four stages: Introduction, development. Climax and finale. The introduction should group the characters and indicate their relations at a glance for there is no time, as in stage representation, to gradually introduce the dramatis personae and explain the plot. A point that adds greatly to the possibilities of a successful picture is the introduction of an element of suspense. This may be in the form of either an interrupted situation, or what is considered still stronger, the manipulation of an anti climax; that is, a sudden but temporary reversal or change of situation between the climax and finale. In comedies, extremely complicated relations should be avoided, not only because this is not the best form of Comedy, but also for the reason that this kind of play has run its gamut of forms; and novelties are the making of the most desirable pictures. Serious comedy is the most acceptable, with farce comedy second; it will be noticed that both these forms of play necessarily entail an absolutely defined plot. The moving picture play has altogether outgrown themes of single individuals in a series of incidents that have no relation to one another except for the presence of the main character. For instance, the mischievous small boy in a series of pranks; the victim of sneeze powder...
