Excerpt from An Address to the Protestant Inhabitants of Canada: Dangerous Character of the Education Act of 1846, and the Amendments Proposed Therein by the Superintendent of Education for C. E., To Be Submitted to the Provincial Legislature During the Session of 1849 The national benefits accruing to the ancients, how ever, according to their views, from their systems of education, the efforts for accomplishing them which they made, and the facility with which they carried them into effect, ought to stimulate the inhabitants of this free and enlightened age and country, to expedite the solution of the question now before them, and to place it on a rational, permanent, and actively useful basis, that the world, with this Province, may, as speedily as possible, derive the benefits it is so eminently calculated to confer. Having the advantage of so much experience in the success and failure of other countries before them, together with the causes, which, in the one case, have operated to bind it, and in the other, to facilitate the progress of Education, there would appear no good reason, were the question entertained with candour and good faith, apart from political intrigue, and sectarian bigotry, why it should not be Speedily settled.
