Dublin, Jan. 10, 1721. A Thousand things f have vexed me of late years, upon which I am determined to lay open my mind to you. J I rather chuse to appeal to you than to my Lord Chief Justice Whitshed, under the situation I am in. For I take this cause properly to lie before you: You are a much fitter judge of what concerns the credit of a writer, the injuries that are done him, and the reparations he ought to receive. Besides, I doubt whether the arguments I could suggest to prove my own inno This letter Mr. Pope never received. Pope. Nor did he believe it was ever sent. Warburton. f No piece of Swift contains more political knowledge, more love of the English constitution, and national liberty, than appears in this celebrated letter; and it is not a little wonderful that Pope should affirm he never received it. Warton. X Whatever were in fact the political opinions of Swift, it is evident that at the time this letter was written he had by no means relinquished the idea of accepting promotion, and perhaps of obtaining some share in the direction of public affairs. It is in fact a disavowal of his Tory principles, although expressed with dignity and caution; and its object is to shew that neither his opinions nor his conduct had ever been such as could justify his total exclusion...
