I don t know, he s a terror. Every town and village in Ireland is knuckling under to him, an the people taking the pledge in thousands. Mike. There is no doubt but he is a wonder. He could charm the heart out of a stone with that soft speech of his. Steve Moran ought to be the proud man. Who d have thought that he d have a genius in the family? Tis a quare world. Barney. I don t know but that genius is a doubtful blessing, a sort of double-edged sword, cutting both ways. If you set a born simpleton to watch a pot boiling, you may be sure he ll see the job through, but if you tell a genius to do it, you re in dread that he will be making a steam ingine or something out of it. Tis a lot safer an more comfortable to have an ordinary sort o son. Mike. Faith, I won t go against you in that. I d rather have a slow horse under me than one that might be quick and restive. Genius is as uncertain as cards. (Enter Steve Moran from back.) Steve. Good-day, men. Tis nt often I see ye here so early. Mike. An tis seldom we come, Steve, but we both rambled over on a little business to-day. Steve. Ye are both Welcome, either for business or pleasure. Barney. We know that, Steve; I want to ask you for the loan of your grey mare for to-morrow, that is, if you won t be putting her under the shafts yourself. Steve....
