Excerpt: . . . of same; Fig. 4, an enlarged front elevation of one of the end shoes for the cutter-head, and Figs. 5 and 6 side elevations of same. As represented in the drawings, the inclined elevator or railway A (of which only a short portion is shown) is of a form commonly used for raising cakes of ice to the house in which they are stored, and on which the cakes are moved by means of endless chains that are driven by any suitable motive power; but, while it should be understood that said chains are used in this apparatus, they form no part of my invention, and are therefore omitted from the drawings. B represents guide-frames for the cutter-head of the planing device, which are erected on the string-pieces a of the inclined elevator. Said guide-frames may be made of angle-bars that are arranged so...
