We must base our judgment in the future on evidence of training and of general conduct, not on isolated examinations. If our young people fail to show intelligence in later life, it is as a rule because the conditions under which we place them in earlier life are such as not only to leave their intelligence undeveloped, but, what is far worse, such as to mar their ability. There are three courses open to examining bodies--to lead, to maintain themselves just abreast of the times, to stagnate. As a matter of fact the last is that almost invariably chosen--a syllabus when once adopted remaining in force year after year. Consequently examinations tend to retard rather than to favour the introduction of improved methods. Hahnemann himself would never have become a doctor of medicine if that degree had not been secured...
