The most important items covered can be included under two main heads: Direct regulation and indirect regulation. Direct regulation is effected through legislation in specified employments relative to: Minimum age; minimum educational requirements for work permits; minimum physical requirements for work permits; maximum hours of labor; night work; issuance of work permits; health provisions, and inspection. Indirect regulation is effected through legislation relative to: Compulsory school attendance - provisions for both the school age and the length of term, and continuation and evening schools - school age and length of term being the two points to be considered here, likewise. The effect of indirect legislation is no less definite than that of direct legislation. Rather, it is recognized that the enforcement of the child-labor law is practically impossible without the assistance of a school attendance law which keeps the child in school during the time when he is not legally permitted to work. The continuation school laws, most of which have been enacted within the past two years, are particularly important for they follow the child into industry, keep him under the supervision of the school, and give him an opportunity to supplement his education. In presenting the provisions of the laws, certain difficulties were encountered. It was not always...
