With regard to the responsibilities incurred in case of the failure of underpinning operations, Mr. Edwin Nash, in his paper on Failures in Construction, makes the following remarks: -- When we see that accidents under this head may cause verdicts of manslaughter to be recorded against architects, as was the case against Mr. Abraham, after the noted fall of a house in the Strand in 1853, we must be awakened to the necessity of so arranging the business part of such operations that the architect shall not be made responsible for details he cannot control. It is often a sort of work that requires intelligent Transactions, R.I.B.A. 1876, vol. xiv. watching during every moment of its progress, and this is not the architect s business; and if this view be not recognised by courts of law, it behoves us to define the responsibility in a written document between architect and builder before commencing the work. It is not, however, in connection with ruinous structures that we must look for the most general use of needle shoring, for walls are, as a rule, underpinned at once, without its aid, when the foundations first...
