Quot homines tot sententi; so many men, so many fancies. My fancy was for an island. Perhaps boyhoods glamour hung yet round sea-girt rocks, and faery lands forlorn, still beckoned me; perhaps I felt that London was too full, the Highlands rather fuller, the Swiss mountains most insufferably crowded of them all. Money can buy company, and it can buy retirement. The latter service I asked now of the moderate wealth with which my poor cousin Toms death had endowed me. Everybody was good enough to suppose that I rejoiced at Toms death, whereas I was particularly sorry for it, and was not consoled even by the prospect of the island. My friends understood this wish for an island as little as they appreciated my feelings about poor Tom. Beatrice was most emphatic in declaring that a horrid little island had no charms for her, and that she would never set foot in it. This declaration was rather annoying, because I had imagined myself, spending my honeymoon with Beatrice on the island; but life is not all honeymoon, and I...
