Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Danger Zone: The Position of the United States Regarding Navy and Merchant Marine; An Historically Accurate Report of the Conference at Washington on Limitation of Armament Marquis of Salisbury, Prime Minister of England (after conclusion of Boer War): There have been great colonial and maritime powers, four or five, but they have always fallen. . If we ever allow our defenses at sea to fall to such a point of inefficiency that it is as easy, or nearly as easy, to cross the sea as it is to cross a land frontier, our great Empire, stretching to the ends of the earth, supported by maritime force in every part of it, will come cluttering to the ground whenever a blow at the metropolis of England is struck. Prince Bernhard Von Bulow, German Chancellor, from his book, Imperial Germany, p. 20: The policy of no state in the world is so firmly bound by tradition as that of England; and it is in no small degree due to the unbroken continuity of her foreign policy, handed down from century to century, pursuing its aims on definite lines, and independent of the changes of party government, that England has attained such magnificent successes in world politics. The Alpha and Omega of English policy has always been the attainment and maintenance of English naval supremacy. To this aim all other considerations, friendships as well as enmities, have always been subordinated. Homer Lea (American) The Day of the Saxon, p. 36: The political relationship between the United States and the British Empire must be regarded in the same light as that of other races. Whatever are their strong...
