Excerpt from Abraham Lincoln's Contemporaries: Harriet Beecher Stowe; Excerpts From Newspapers and Other Sources A negro town Looking out the doors and Windows of the cabins, lounging in the door ways, leaning over the low frame fences gather ing into quickly forming, quickly dissolving groups in the dusty streets they swarm they are here from milk-white though all deepening shades to glossy blackness; octo-rooms, quad rooms, mulattoes some With large liquid black eyes, refined features, delicate forms! Working, gossiping, higgling over prices around a vegetable cart, discussing last night's church festival, to day's funeral, or next week's railway excursion, sleeping, planning how to get work and how to escape. It. From some unseen old figure in a boyaunt turban, bending over the washtub in the rear of a cabin comes a crooned song of indescribable pathos; behind a half closed front shutter, a Moorish hued amoroso in gay linen thrums his banjo in a measure of ecstatic gaiety, preluding the more passionate melodies of the coming night. Here a fiddle; there the sound of the fiddle...
