Celene Richards is the intelligent and beautiful daughter of a prominent businessman with an extremely lucrative architectural firm. Her life was one of comfort, until she met her husband, James. He is tall, handsome, and ambitious. After weaseling his way in good with Celenes father, he decides the best way into the company was through marrying Celene. On the outside, they look like the perfect couple. Celene is rich, and James is determined. But behind closed doors, he was as abusive as he was attractive. From the beginning, their relationship was based off physical and mental abuse. In order to escape the reality of her loveless marriage, Celene uses romance novels to transport her mind and parts of her body to far off places. . . The final straw for Celene came after she caught James in the throes of a pornographic fling. With their divorce in the works, Celene wonders if she hasnt just sentenced herself to a life of solitude. Just as she falls into a deep depression, her five best friends, led by the fearless Sheila, convince Celene to pamper herself at an incredible resort. On her first day away, Celene realizes that this wont be an ordinary two-week getaway. . . The staff is attentive, professional, and at times, a little too friendly. When Celene meets with Gareth, the owner of the resort, she realizes that he is paying special attention to her, and that maybe he could offer her a little more than room service. . .
