We allude to the famous words which he is said to have addressed in his last moments to the young Earl of Warwick See in what peace a Christian can die. The story originated with Young, who said he had it from Tickell; adding, that the Earl led an irregular life, which Addison wished to reclaim. But, according to Malone, who was a scrupulous inquirer, there is no evidence of the Earl s having led any such life; and Walpole, in one of his letters that were published not long ago, startled - we should rather say, shocked - the world, by telling them that Addison died of brandy. It is acknowledged by his best friends, that the gentle moralist, whose bodily temperament was as sorry a one as his mind was otherwise, had gradually been tempted to stimulate it with wine, till he became intemperate in the indulgence. It is impossible to say what other stimulants might not gradually have crept in; nor is it improbable that, during the patient s last hours, the physician himself might have ordered them. Sustainments of that kind, in dying moments, are frequently, and except in the opinion of superstition, very properly administered; generally, out of pure humanity; often, in order to enable the sufferer to speak his last words, which may be of great importance. He may take the stimulant without knowing what it is; may suppose it to be one of those divine medicines with. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and...
