Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Wellesley Magazine, Vol. 7: October, 1898 You may be sure he has not far to go. The gin palace is one of the London sights, especially on a Saturday or Sunday evening, or most Of all on a bank holiday, when men and women struggle with one another on the jammed threshold, and the services Of the chucker out are in frequent demand. There is fighting sometimes, but singing more Often. Some faces are sullen or desperate, but the most are good-humored enough, - craving human nature after its tuppence worth of joy. Now and then, when some poor fellow has drunk himself to the state of a mere foul bundle, one of London s fourteen thousand blue kings appears as by magic to prop and steer the reeling thing down the first convenient alley. Where s the copper talkin im? Pipes a childish voice on bus-top. Ee ll walk im about a bit, till ee gets the throw of is legs; and then if ee can speak out is number, its elpin im ome ee ll be, comes...
