Taken so, and with no exaltation of the human priest, this doctrine presents no real difficulty except upon the principles of the Solifidian, who would exclude the necessity of good works, and ought upon his own principles to exclude also the necessity of prayer, lest it should interfere with the integrity of the one effectual Intercession. The Holy Eucharist ought, therefore, to be taken with primary 1 1 Cor. xi. 30. For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep. See Narrative, p. 97. VOL. I. Q reference to the continued and continuous attitude of the High-Priest in heaven, whereby He pleads before the eternal throne His unrenowable Sacrifice, made once for all, and only with secondary relation to the...
