WgNOTHER war breaking out in China, -my dear old Captain George St. Vincent King, asked me to go as his second-incommand of the above ship. She had been Sir Robert Stopford s Flag ship, at the capture of Acre. Tho not greatly satisfied at being passed over in promotion, I gladly accepted his offer; and after lading with stores of all kinds at Portsmouth, we were towed down Channel: when, making sail, --on we went. Off Plymouth, we were informed of the fearful Indian mutiny. A fresh breeze, --accompanied by our friends, the dear little Mother Carey s chickens, took us to Madeira, where we remained a couple of days; then after experiencing the usual bother in getting through the variables, we crossed the Equator, and shaped our course for the Cape of Good Hope, --now and then catching dolphins, bonetas, and sharks. I was taking my usual siesta at noon one day, when I heard Captain King (who had the cabin above me), calling out my name lustily. On rushing up, I found that he had hooked an enormous shark, and was playing him with both hands; but this could not last long, so picking up his rifle, which lay near, I made a most successful shot--striking the fish on the spine--thereby paralyzing the monster; then, going on deck, a rope was soon rove through a block on the mainyard, a bowling knot was passed round him, and, as he...
