As pay for management, risk and use of capital the final computation of rate earned on total invested capital on Illinois farms for 1928 was 2. 9 percent. No satisfactory method is known for valuing management of farms but if one percent on the investment be considered as pay for management there remained 1. 9 percent for the risk and use of capital invested. Based on the average of all farms in the Illinois farm account project for the 5 years 1924 to 1928 one percent of the capital invested has been equivalent to 8. 5 percent of the gross income. The farm earnings given above represent the average for the rank and file of farmers. Repeated studies of earnings on all farms in typical areas have shown that the average earnings for all farms are lower than for farms included in the farm accounting project. Allowance has been made for this fact. The difference has been found to be consistently about 2 percent of the investment in favor of the account keepers. For this reason the following figures for the farm accounting cooperators of Boone, McHenry and Winnebago counties should not, be taken to represent average farm earnings for this area. It is probable that earnings on the average farm for 1929 were about 2 percent less than for these progressive and businesslike farmers. The 51 farmers in these counties who kept financial records in the Illinois farm account project for 1929 earned...
